

Sally Barker is a dedicated public servant with a talent for creative solutions. Sally currently serves as GPSA Chief of Staff where she is learning to be the Voice of Graduate Students. As GPSA President, Sally will work to maintain assistantships and tuition levels. On-the-job experience has helped her develop ideas to benefit students including ways to increase engagement and improve the flow of information. Sally is a second semester MPA Student and is excited to lead and serve. As your GPSA President, Sally will listen to the student voice and will endlessly advocate for Graduate and Professional Students.

Kelly Johnson, a PhD student in Exercise Physiology, holds a bachelor's degree in Exercise Science from Eastern Washington University and a Master's degree in Exercise Science from the University of Akron. As UNM GPSA President, Kelly will lead with integrity, courage, and be attentive with an open ear. Kelly will continue to work towards increasing funding for research, travel grants, scholarships, and seek new avenues to fund assistantships for students. Kelly will build upon GPSA's existing momentum to promote unity across both campuses, while continuing to protect and defend resources for graduate students.

Glenda Lewis is a fourth year PhD Candidate in Language, Literacy, and Sociocultural Studies from Clovis, New Mexico. She is the Vice President of the College of Education Graduate Student Leadership Alliance, the UNM GPSA Student Support & Advocacy Committee Chair, and a UNM GPSA Finance Committee member. Her dedication and leadership has enabled her to work closely with and advocate for all graduate and professional students at the university. If elected as the next UNM GPSA President she will continue to promote solidarity, interdisciplinary collaboration and sustainable funding opportunities for all graduate and professional students.
